108 Mala Beads: A Year of Haiku Bradly Jay Keller

Bradly Jay Keller's latest book, 108 Mala Beads: A Year of Haiku, is a collection of haiku style poetry. Using Nature as his guide, the book is written within the span of one year. Within these haiku the seasons of time's passing are reflected like a clear pond reflects the image of clouds passing through the sky. The intent of reading these haiku, as stated by the author in the Preface, is a moment of spontaneous awakening and clarity. The author states that these haiku originally manifested in a moment of awakening and clarity. The author's intent is that by reading these haiku the reader will experience a similar moment of awakening, as if the writer's awakening experience is transmitted to the reader. The author describes this transmission of awakening as one of the primary functions of art, music and poetry.
