Since laughter is indeed the best medicine and truly takes us away from our humdrum lives and trials for the time our noses are in the book, I want to be a vehicle of laughter in the lives of my readers. I give all credit of my sense of humor to the Eberhart side of my family, the family I grew up with. Though we had our trials, humor was always in the background and ready to be seen in every situation. Consequently, I grew up with what I call a silly sense of humor, the kind that laughs long after the incident has passed, the kind that makes other people look at you and wonder what your problem is.
