Here's the latest collection of comic panels by the proudly scatterbrained cartoonist and his constant companion, Cuppa Joe. Regular readers of Speed Bump will recognize the subtle ironies and the overlooked details we all take for granted, as well as the occasional wordplay and the gentle pokes at the absurd ways in which we live and love. Irregular readers might try bran. Much like his last book, this tome covers a wide range of topics: kids and parenting, love and relationships, work and business, and — as Dave is a regular contributor to PETA's Animal Times — more than a few animal cartoons. The humour here comes from human traits we all have. Speed Bump has millions of readers on several land masses around the world. It has found its way onto refrigerator doors, church bulletin boards, and greeting cards, and into textbooks, tv programs, and even a U.S. Congressional hearing. But being the nice folks that we are, we've saved you the trouble of tracking the cartoons down yourself by binding them into this book.
