The Sin of Killing

A love story. A tale of murder, guilt and redemption. Killing animals, particularly a dog, is asin. It invokes anger of the gods sitting somewhere in the skies. Sometimes people ignore everything, but such people often meet a bad end. When their dog and the son of their farm manager are killed by unknown men one night, two small children, Ahsen and his sweet cousin Najma, discuss the repercussions of the sin and pray for their dog while adults are praying for the main victim, the human being. Now twenty years later when Najma has settled in USA with her husband, one of the killers has, by chance, died in a bomb blast. Ahsen is scared. He wants to share the news with his cousin, but doesn't know how. In doing so he will have to tell her that he identified the killers almost from day one. Will he confess? In a way he does. It is literary fiction and the story is about life, love and honour killings in Pakistan.
